Transformational Leadership

Are you a transformational leader?

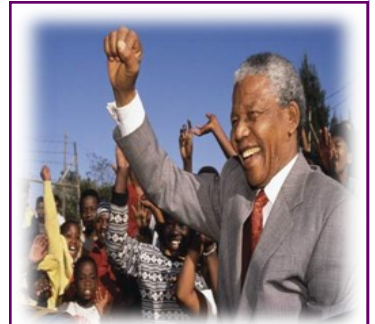

Transformational leaders keep a focus on the shared vision. They seize every opportunity to persuade others to climb on board and they rally the team by listening, soothing, and even enthusing. They balance task management with relationship management.

While transformers have a selling style of leadership, they include their trust and their personal integrity as part of the package that they sell.

By modeling the expected attitudes and actions, transformational leaders motivate and inspire by providing oversight of group performance and by mentoring individuals toward personal accomplishment and fulfillment.

They are highly valued in organizations that need to abandon the status quo. If these characteristics describe you, perhaps some organization is waiting for you to initiate an extreme makeover today.

So remember to give yourself the gift of reflection.
