

Reflective Living with Dr. Angela

Where are You Looking for Love?

Are you looking for love in all the wrong places?

When you cultivate self love, you are better able to perceive love from the most honorable places. You can feel love in the crispness of a cold winter's day or in the breeze of a hot summer's night.

You can see love in the purity of driven snow as much as you can in the brilliant colors of flowers. You can detect love in the midnight sun as well as you can in the brightness of the day.

You can sense love before you and behind you, above you, and beneath you. Why not learn to discover, recognize, and take time to enjoy the love that is all around you?

When you do, you are less likely to look for love in all the wrong places.

Similar topics are available electronically:

- Vision for Love
- The Stages and Seasons of Love
- The Spirit of Love

So remember to give yourself the gift of reflection.