The Trio of Successful Intelligence

Do you know your strengths and how to capitalize on them?

People with successful intelligence do. You should determine if your strength is in creative intelligence, analytical intelligence, or practical intelligence.

With creative intelligence, you find good questions. With analytical intelligence, you find good solutions. But with practical intelligence, you make solutions work.

Take time to reflect so that you will know how to showcase your gifts and downplay your weaknesses. If you know your strengths, the next time an opportunity comes your way, you will know if it is suited for you and/or the parts of it that you should lead.

Tune into your primary intelligence. Your life's call will make the most of those treasures that lie deepest within you.
